Streetlaw is a public legal education programme where law students teach the law in schools, community groups and other organisations. Streetlaw programmes aim to educate people on their legal rights and responsibilities using an interactive methodology which encourages participants to actively engage and to understand how the law relates to them.

The Law Society of Ireland's Diploma Centre is delighted to host the 2nd (Ireland & UK) Streetlaw best practice conference.

THIS INTERACTIVE TWO DAY CONFERENCE, WILL SHARE STREETLAW BEST PRACTICE FROM ACROSS THE GLOBE AND FEATURE KEYNOTE SESSIONS ON:

- The power of hands-on to avoid hands-up: How StreetLaw's interactive methods help educate and engage youth around their civil and criminal rights - Professor Rick Roe, Georgetown University Law Center & Dr. Seán Arthurs, Senior Manager of Education Initiatives, National PTA.
- Investigating public legal education 'Study, Scholarship and StreetLaw' – Richard Grimes, legal education and access to justice consultant.

THE CONFERENCE WILL ALSO COVER:

- different models for community engagement through Streetlaw;
- sample Streetlaw best practice sessions;
- design a lesson workshops;
- tips and ideas for developing your Streetlaw programme.

If you have a best practice session that you would like to share at the conference please email: j.lunney@lawsociety.ie with the details.

Please note we cannot guarantee that we will be able to fit everyone into the programme.
